Sandusky on suicide watch

Defense team questions court decisions, plans to appeal convictions

CNN

BELLEFONTE, Pa. Former Penn State assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky will likely spend the rest of his life behind bars after a jury convicted him on 45 of 48 counts related to sexual abuse of boys, ending a painful chapter for victims and the entire university.

But the ordeal is not over, as Sandusky's defense team announced plans to appeal despite the mountain of convictions against his client.

"If you win on one of the appeal issues, everything probably falls," attorney Joe Amendola said. "So all we have to do is convince an appellate court that one of the issues that we will raise is worthy of a reversal. ... It doesn't matter, it could be 100 counts, and it would still all come back if an appeal is granted."

His co-counsel, Karl Rominger, cited questionable court decisions during the trial as grounds for appeal.

"The judge was very fair to us on many levels, but there were a lot of unique legal issues where he made rulings that could be overturned, not because they were, per se, wrong, but because the law in the area was so unclear," Rominger said.

He said "substantial constitutional questions" surrounded the prosecution's ability to use an accuser's claims based on hearsay alone. "All the convictions could come back on that ruling alone," Rominger said.

The attorney said Saturday that Sandusky has been placed on a suicide watch for his own safety. He is being held in protective custody, in an area separate from other inmates, as he awaits sentencing.

Jurors delivered the verdict late Friday night after deliberating for 21 hours over two days. They brought convictions related to all 10 sexual abuse victims, with the three not-guilty verdicts applying to three different individuals.

He said "substantial constitutional quesons" surrounded the prosecution's ability to 48 counts in his child sex abuse trial. uspresswire

Sandusky stood slightly hunched, looking down with his hand in his pocket but showing no visible emotion as the guilty verdicts were read out in court. His wife, Dottie, blinked back tears.

Judge John Cleland revoked Sandusky's bail and ordered his arrest.

As Sandusky left the courthouse in handcuffs, reporters asked if he had anything to say to the victims.

The 68-year-old remained silent as he ducked into the back seat of a police car destined for the Centre County jail.

"The Sandusky family is very disappointed, obviously, by the verdict of the jury, but we respect their verdict," Amendola told reporters gathered outside the courthouse. Jeering crowds occasionally interrupted his comments.

At the same time, Amendola pointed to a "tidal wave of public opinion" against his client as one of several factors that led him to believe this outcome wasn't surprising.

"It was the expected outcome because of the overwhelming evidence against Jerry Sandusky," he said.

Victim's quiet win

CNN

BELLEFONTE, Pa. His heart pounded under his striped, maroon polo shirt as the one they call Alleged Victim No. 6 waited in a packed courtroom Friday to hear the verdicts in the Jerry Sandusky child molestation case.

He is 25 now, lean and broad shouldered with short brown hair and big dark eyes. For years, he struggled with the fact that Sandusky, a local football hero, crossed the line with him in a locker room shower in 1998.

No. 6 was the only one of the accusers, the so-called "Sandusky 8," to come to court for the verdicts. He chewed gum with intensity, his jaws clenching and releasing as Sandusky, looking wan and bent in a brown sports jacket, lumbered into the courtroom shortly before 10 p.m.

The jurors took their seats, looking tired and sad. One woman appeared to be crying.

The young man's mother locked fingers with him with one hand, placed the other over his forearm and her head on his shoulder. She started to cry. Soon, they would hear whether there would be justice.

Count One: Guilty of involuntary deviate sexual intercourse with Victim No. 1.

No. 6 smiled.

Count Two: Guilty again, of the same charge.

No. 6 nodded, and his smile grew broader.

Count Three: Guilty of indecent assault.

And so it went. Sandusky was convicted of 45 of 48 counts against him. They covered the gamut of child molestation—everything from oral and anal sex to corrupting the morals of 10 boys over 15 years.

Love him or not, LeBron will rule

In all the ink and bytes being spilled over LeBron James and his first NBA championship, it feels like no one has acknowledged that the sheer outpouring of opinion is the answer to the question itself: Yes, LeBron James is going to be the most iconic basketball player ever. When I say

"iconic," I'm talking about the ephemeral combination of narrative and talent. Besides that, will he also be the best of all time when he leaves? Probably.

I know, I know: six rings, The Shot, the flu game, whine, piss, moan. Don't worry, Bulls fans, that was as hard for me to say as it was for you to hear. I'm a Cavs fan, and I had to watch the guy I grew up playing down the highway from, who was supposed to be the savior of one of America's most beleaguered sports towns, walk away. When he left, it sports-shattered my sports-heart.

To this day I still have not watched "The Decision," and I likely never will. Watching the postgame celebration after the Miami Heat won the championship Thursday vacillated between nauseating and riding-the-"L"-to-work-hung-over-with-the-air-conditioning-conked-out-when-the-guy-next-toyou-burps-and-it-smells-like-curdled-milk.

If it would ensure LeBron would never win a championship, I'd gladly give back my all-time greatest sports performance, when I dropped 19 points in a JV game (including three straight 3s in the first quarter-no humblebrag, just brag!).

History is always hard to see as it's being written. Whether you're a basketball nerd and pay attention only to basketball nerd stuff like "player efficiency rating" or simply want to count rings, it stands to reason that LeBron at age 27 will put together a string of seasons that rival or surpass anything Michael, Wilt, Oscar, Magic or Bird managed.

Winning a Jordanesque six rings seems eminently possible, while I would be shocked if he totaled fewer than four (and don't even give me the Dwyane Wade argument; Jordan had Pippen, a top 50 all-time player and-without getting into an esoteric B.J. Armstrong vs. Mario Chalmers debate-each of those six rings was won with a better team. than James has yet had at his disposal).

Yet the controversy of "The Decision" itself coupled with the bogus, simplistic and uninteresting redemption storyline of this year's finals versus last year's (he played better in one than the other, and ESPN writes about it like it's frigging "Rudy") will only play into the narrative. As teammate Shane Battier pointed out, LeBron is the first true superstar of the 24-hour social media age, which, along with his polarizing celebrity, will only act to cement his status and further his legend. Therefore, he's an icon who will almost certainly live up to the hype.

The only comfort I can take is that sports heroism is inherently impermanent. All legends fade, all heroics become bedtime stories, all spectacle looks weirdly slow-motion and grainy when you watch them two decades later. Except for my 19-point sophomore firestorm. That [bleep] will live forever. REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR STEPHEN MARKLEY IS THE AUTHOR OF "PUBLISH THIS BOOK." REDEVECHICAGO.COM/ MARKLEY

CTA THEFTS. ROBBERIES ON RISE SINCE 2009

Chicago Tribune

Criminals snatching electronic devices from commuters' purses, pockets and even their hands fueled a dramatic surge in reported thefts and robberies aboard CTA buses and trains, according to a Tribune analysis of crime data from 2009 through 2011.

Authorities, however, see signs of improvement in the most recent crime statistics. They say the assignment of more mass-transit police officers and new crime-fighting strategies are working, and CTA-related crime has been heading down in recent months.

But they are battling an entrenched problem, made worse by the rise of smartphones and other expensive devices that thieves and robbers can turn into easy cash.

"It made me angry," said Sarah Halpern, a 22-yearold Urbana resident whose iPhone was snatched on a Brown Line train in October. "For someone to take your cellphone in this day and age, it's such a slap in the face."

Thefts, the No. 1 reported crime on buses and trains, rose 42 percent from 2009 through 2011, with almost 2,000 incidents reported by CTA passengers last year, according to a Tribune analysis of Chicago Police Department statistics posted on the city's public data portal.

Through the first five and a half months of this year, thefts are down from last year's peak, but still up considerably from 2009.

Robberies of CTA passengers soared by 69 percent from 2009 through 2011, from almost 500 reported in 2009 to more than 800 last year. Robberies, which involve force or intimidation, are the second-mostcommon crime on the CTA rail system and rank third on buses, behind batteries.

Batteries increased 15 percent on buses and about 1 percent on rail from 2009 through 2011, according to the police records.

Chicago police do not publish detailed reports on CTA crime. The Tribune spent months examining the city's crime database and CTA ridership records to uncover trends. The CTA-related crimes the Tribune studied are limited to reported incidents in the city, and focused on the most recent years for which complete full-year data were available. They may seriously underestimate actual total crimes because officials acknowledge many victims do not report CTArelated crimes.

Police and CTA officials point out that the crime

FOR THE RECORD

The Police Department only started keeping records of CTArelated crimes at bus stops in mid-2008. and police officials cautioned that 2008 and 2009 totals may have been underreported, while they were more confident about the 2010 and 2011 bus crime data.

numbers are small compared with CTA ridership about 5,800 crimes were reported on the CTA last year and 532 million rides were provided. And they are encouraged by numbers for the first five and a half months of this year-CTA-related robberies were down 31 percent, batteries declined by 22 percent and thefts declined 14 percent, compared with the same period in 2011.

The dynamics of riding public transit have changed. Not long ago, the most valuable items CTA riders carried onto buses and trains were backpacks and briefcases. Today many riders don't think twice about carrying a $600 phone onto the transit system and using it freely. Such confidence is good, according to police.

"That is a huge part of driving down the numbers of crimes" in recent months, said Capt. Thomas Lemmer, executive officer of the Police Department's public transportation section. "You want the community to be both safe in reality and to believe they are safe, because both feed off each other."

Once a CTA-related crime occurs, the odds greatly favor perpetrators getting away, according to the Tribune analysis. Arrests at the time of CTA-related crimes have been on a mostly downward trend for more than a decade. Last year, police made arrests in 35 percent of all CTA-related crimes, compared with nearly 38 percent in 2010 and more than 40 percent in 2009. In 2001, police made arrests in more than 53 percent of CTA-related crimes.

Arrests were made in less than 4 percent of thefts and about 15 percent of robberies last year. Police made arrests in more than 29 percent of batteries.

CRIMES AT CTA RAIL STATIONS

From Jan. 1, 2009 to June 13 of this year, 3,943 crimes occurred at CTA stations, of which 38 percent were robberies or thefts. Red, Blue and Green line stations had the largest number of overall crimes, while riders boarding at Brown Line stations west of Southport experienced the least amount of crime. ALEX BORDENS/TRIBUNE

METHODOLOGY

To conduct this geographic analysis, data from the city of Chicago's data portal was filtered for the location description "CTA Platform." Data were further filtered to exclude deceptive practice incidents, or cases where a rider jumped the turnstyle, then plotted on a map using geographic coordinates included with each record. A 1/8-mile radius was drawn around each CTA station and any crime that occurred within the circle was attributed to the station. Roughly 93 percent (3,943) of non-deceptive practice crimes that had coordinates in their records fell within the 1/8-mile threshold and are displayed on the map and in the charts below. The city also tracks crime on CTA trains, but the records could not confidently be attributed to a station, as some crimes occurred between stations.

Dancers perform in front of a record crowd while riding on a float Sunday in the Pride parade, вкоск ваккивающе

Out and about

Governor, mayor and thousands of revelers mix and mingle for annual Pride parade

Chicago Tribune

A record number of onlookers gathered along the newly rerouted path of Sunday's annual Pride parade, officials said.

City officials said this year's parade drew an estimated 850,000 people.

Delores Robinson of the Office of Emergency Management gave that figure as the crowds continued to disperse. Last year's attendance was estimated at 750,000. Robinson said no "unusual incidents" had been reported.

The parade kicked off at noon with Mayor Emanuel and Gov. Quinn at the front of the parade as it began its march from the Uptown neighborhood.

Minutes before the parade began, Emanuel, dressed in khaki pants, a blue gingham shirt and tennis shoes, was speedwalking around, shaking hands with police, posing for pictures with parade goers and greeting the throngs gathered behind metal barriers on Broadway and Montrose Avenue.

The final floats were embarking south down Broadway as the parade began to wrap up.

Though the route was reinvented because of crowding concerns last year, the thousands who lined the street saw that the parade's aesthetic was unchanged.

The procession was the usual mix of politics, commercialism and unabashed sexuality, with politicians leading the parade followed by men in hot pants dancing to techno music, women on loud motorcycles and floats branded with business logos.

Marissa Zesinger of Chicago marched for the first time since coming out of the closet in January. Carrying a sign for the Center on Halsted, Zesinger said it was gratifying to see people, gay and straight, supporting one another.

"It makes you feel not alone," she said.

Parade coordinator Richard Pfeiffer said the event had run smoothly as of 2 p.m., and Chicago police reported no serious disturbances.

Last year, the event was marred by pre-parade vandalism of dozens of floats.

"So far, so good. We just hope the weather holds," Pfeiffer said earlier in the day before gray clouds moved out.

Teen dies over violent weekend

Chicago Tribune

A 13-year-old boy was one of two people killed, and 13 other people were wounded late Saturday and early Sunday in shootings that stretched from Montrose Avenue to 97th Street, authorities said.

Two other boys, 14 and 15, were shot and wounded while playing basketball on the South Side, and a man was shot after a funeral party, also on the South Side, police said.

The spree of shootings followed a violent night Friday through Saturday morning, when a 14-year-old boy was killed and 13 other people were wounded.

On Saturday, Chicago police said they collected more than 5,500 weapons-ranging from assault weapons to BB guns and replicas-during an annual gun buy-back program. So many guns were turned in, police say they ran out of giftcards to hand out.

In the shootings overnight, Tyquan Tyler, 13, was at a party with his sister, 19, in the 6200 block of South Rhodes Avenue when a fight broke out about 1:20 a.m., police said. The two ran from the fight but someone pulled a gun and fired, hitting the box police

Police say neither Tyquan nor his sister belonged to a gang.

Egyptians choose Muslim Brotherhood

CAIRO Islamist Mohamed Morsi was declared Egypt's first freely elected president Sunday, sparking joy among his Muslim Brotherhood supporters on the streets who vowed to continue a struggle to take power from the generals who retain ultimate control.

Morsi defeated former general Ahmed Shafik in a run-off last weekend by a convincing 3.5 percentage points, or nearly 900,000 votes, taking 51.7 percent of the total, officials said, ending a week of disputes over the count that left nerves fraved.

He succeeds Hosni Mubarak, who was overthrown 16 months ago after a popular uprising. The military council that has ruled the biggest Arab nation since then has this month curbed the powers of the presidency, meaning the head of state will have to work closely with the army on a planned democratic constitution.

Brotherhood officials, speaking as supporters turned Cairo's Tahrir Square into a roaring sea of flags and chants of "Allahu akbar!" (God is greatest), said they would press on with protest vigils to demand that the ruling military

CHANGING SOX

Can South Siders' deal for Boston All-Star put third base issues to rest?

By Matt Lindner

FOR REDEVE

Boston third baseman Kevin Youkilis needed a change of scenery in the midst of the worst season of his career. The White Sox needed more offense from the hot corner.

Both things came to fruition Sunday afternoon. GM Kenny Williams pulled the trigger on a deal to acquire Youkilis and cash from the Red Sox in exchange for outfielder Brent Lillibridge and recently demoted reliever Zach Stewart.

Youkilis will join the team in Minnesota and is expected to play immediately.

"He wants to come in and prove some people wrong, "Williams said of the slugger, who is hitting .225 with four home runs and 13 RBIs. "He's got a little bit of an edge to him, which I like, and I think he's gonna fit in just fine with our ballelub."

If Youkilis can get on track, he'll add much-needed punch to a lineup that ranks near the middle of the pack in batting average, on-base percentage and hits. He is a career .287 hitter known for his patience at the plate, something that excites new teammate Paul Konerko.

"He's just a gritty kind of player," Konerko said. "We're happy to have him and I think it could be a steal when we look back on it."

A somber Lillibridge took questions from reporters at his locker as teammates and others stopped by to say goodbye. He found out about the deal late in Sunday's game when he was lifted for a pinch hitter.

"They pulled me into the shop and I thought I was in trouble," he said. "It's just part of [the game]. I'm gonna miss this place a lot. I've been here for a long time but I'm excited though for me personally to see where my career will go."

"You've gotta give up good players to get good players," manager Robin Ventura said. "As much as we hate seeing [Lillibridge] go,

A deal for Deng?

According to espechicago.com, Luci Deng is not getting caught up in the rumors that suggest the Bulls might trade him before Thursday's NBA draft, "As much as I want to stay on the team-I love Chicago, I love the Bulls-at the same time, I know the business part of it. Sooner or later, all the rumors are going to come up," the forward told the website.

you have to do that to get a good player."

The acquisition of Youkilis means the White Sox's current starting third baseman, Orlando Hudson, will be moved into a utility role after hitting ,170 with one homer and 11 RBIs in his first 28 games in Chicago.

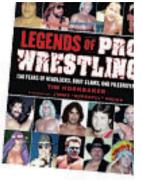

"With the utility role, I'm gonna go and do my best," he said. "I got a job, you know what I'm saying?"

Williams added that despite the fact that attendance hasn't increased as much as he'd like, he's not necessarily done dealing. MATTLINDNER IS A REDEVE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

ATTEND Cubs vs. N.Y. Mets

Monday-Wednesday, Wrigley Field

It looks like the Cubs will miss knuckleball pitcher R.A. Dickeyaka the one-hitter wonder-but they will cross paths with Johan Santana, who's got a no-hitter this season. All right, so the Cubs are still in last place. but the forecast includes pretty much no rain, so raise your hand if you like fresh air!

WATCH Euro 2012

Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday, ESPN In case you're wondering, this is what Europe has been up to the past three weeks. This soccer tournament of powerhouses might be the next-best thing to the World Cup. Germany. Portugal, Spain and Italy are the last four standing. You don't have to worry about the semifinals (Wednesday and Thursday) or final (Sunday) ending in a tie, either.

L.A.T.E. Ride

Midnight Saturday, 500 S. Columbus Drive While most people are fast asleep, you could tour Chicago's neighborhoods on your bike. This 25-mile trek costs $45. And while you're staying in shape, the event also benefits Friends of the Parks, It's like running the Chicago Marathon, except you probably won't need to curl into the fetal position when you're done. It is a leisurely ride, after all, lateride.org

Sky vs. Atlanta

5 p.m. Sunday, Allstate Arena

You'll get a lot more than hoops at this WNBA contest. The Sky will showcase several church choirs as well as gospel superstar Marvin Sapp. The Grammy nominee's 2007 single, "Never Would Have Made It." became the first gospel single to reach 1 million digital downloads. In the meantime, if a higher power wants to help the Sky steamroll to the playoffs, that's cool too. txtable

She did it! RedEye reporter Tracy Swartz set a goal to visit every major league ballpark before she turns 30, and her trip to Kansas City completed her guest, Follow her on Twitter @tracyswartz.

St. Louis 8. Kansas City 2

For my 30th and final baseball park visit, the Royals rolled out the red, er, blue carpet for Saturday's game against the Cardinals. The Royals have spruced up Kauffman Stadium in preparation for next month's All-Star Game. And although the Royals seem proud to host the ASG, the fans don't seem proud of their team. There were more Cards fans than Royals followers at the park. But for me, the Boulevard Brewery options on tap made the trip, which can take awhile because the park is far from downtown. Car travel is required to reach the sports complex, which also includes the Chiefs' stadium. That is one of 12 NFL venues I've visited in the past two years. I hope to visit all 32 stadiums (watching the N.Y. Jets and Giants separately) before I turn 32 in two years. One field goal down, one to go!

THE DIGIT

$5.000 That's how much Philadelphia pitcher Jonathan Papelbon offered to pay teammate Jim Thome for saving the Phillies with his walk-off home run Saturday. Papelbon told the ex-White Sox slugger while he was in the on-deck circle in the ninth inning that he would pay him if he homered. The pitcher had just blown his first save opportunity of the season.

ROMANCE PLANE

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Cancer June 22-July 22 With the sun in your sign, you could be looking over your romantic history and figuring out some disturbing patterns. Don't keep doing the same thing over again just because it's comfortable. You can do better.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22 Mercury will be in your sign for a while, but it also will be retrograde for much of that time. This means you should carefully examine any wacky sexual whim that comes into your brain. Don't call a bunch of strippers over without thinking things over.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22 You're feeling better about a relationship, thanks to Venus. You'll get along well with your sweetheart for a while.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 The moon in your sign is putting you in a flirtatious mood. You'll have sexy chats, send flirty emails and attract attention with your witty banter. What will you do with the spotlight on you?

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21 You know how you have a paranoid and depressive side? The moon is making it worse. You're convinced your honey is sleeping around even though you've kept him locked up for months. Try to gain a little perspective.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21 Your career is annoying you as Jupiter farts in your direction. You're toying with the idea of going back to school so you can become a lumberjack or a chorus girl. Hang out with your honey and forget about it.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19 Uranus is reminding you that you have to keep up with sexual trends. If you're confident about only two sexual positions, expand your repertoire. Don't let your partner's adventurous nature go unsatisfied.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18 Someone who was hot and then cold could become hot again. You might finally hook up with that long-distance cutie. Or you and your high school sweetheart might both find yourselves single and available.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 The sun is bringing you clarity about what went wrong with your last relationship. Watching less porn and playing fewer video games might help. Try focusing on your partner instead.

Aries March 21-April 19 You'll want to show off this week as the moon increases your confidence. Maybe it's time to wear your tightest jeans or your tiniest dress. Sometimes, if you want attention, you have to advertise. Show off your assets.

Taurus April 20-May 20 The moon opposite your sign means you need to avoid making rash decisions. Don't move in with a guy you just met because he asked you. Avoid saying yes to big things like getting married, having kids or buying a home.

Gemini May 21-June 21 You've felt sexually constipated for months. The people you wanted to go to bed with ignored you, while annoying people wouldn't leave you alone. That should change.

Reese Witherspoon can add a Chicago award to her collection

Luis Gomez

Alexander Payne wasn't the obvious choice to host the Gene Siskel Film Center's 'An Evening with Reese Witherspoon* on Saturday at the Ritz-Carlton hotel, but the director and screenwriter best known for "Sideways" and "The Descendants"-neither of which starred Witherspoon-can say one thing about the Oscar-winning actress that few in Hollywood can: He knew her before she was famous. Well, A-list

Payne directed Witherspoon when she was an up-and-comer in the 1999 dark comedy "Election." He said Witherspoon didn't earn the role during an audition, but during their conversations about the script.

"We discussed the script at length, and that's when I figured she'd be right," Payne said. "I'd seen her in 'The Man in the Moon,' so I knew who she was. She seemed right. Most importantly, she was maybe 19 or 20 at the time, but I still believed she could be 17. I hate when they cast high school kids who look older than high school.

"Then I just had a good feeling about it. I needed someone who could be funny, but also believable and heartbreaking, and she was able to hit all those parts in the film."

Witherspoon - who is pregnant with her third child-went on to star in "Legally Blonde" and "Walk the Line" (for which she won the best actress Oscar) and was presented with the Gene Siskel Film Center's Renaissance Award. She was recently cast in the big-screen adaptation of the best-selling book "Men Are From Mars, Women Are From Venus."

"The script is fantastic and it's a fun concept," Witherspoon said when asked why she wanted to be a part of the film. 'Also, I think the male-female gender dynamic is always interesting.8

Payne is scouting locations in Illinois for one of his next films, "Nebraska." The movie will revolve around a father and son as they take a road trip from Billings, Mont., to Lincoln, Neb.

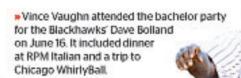

"It might be somewhere in Illinois, but I'm still figuring that out," Payne said. "On Monday and Tuesday I'll be scouting around Galesburg and Moline and Rock Island and then I'll see if there's something that whets my appetite. If not, then I'll do something else."

AUG. 10 That is the new release date for "The Bourne Legacy," according to thr.com. The release was bumped from Aug. 3 to avoid competition with "Total Recall" and "The Dark Knight Rises."

Fearless footage Katy Perry's upcoming documentary, "Part of Me." apparently will include footage of the pop star sobbing over the end of her marriage to Russell Brand-and she's cool with it. "If you were to have seen that movie and walked out and Imy breakup] wasn't at all mentioned like it never happened, you'd be like, 'Eh, this is weird, what is she trying to hide?" Perry told mtv. com. "I don't like to hide."

Wrong note

The Black Keys are suing Pizza Hut and Home Depot over use of its songs in commercials. The rockers say Pizza Hut used "Gold on the Ceiling" and Home Depot appropriated "Lonely Boy" in ads without permission, and they're seeking injunctions against further use as well as monetary damages, thewrap.com reports.

Actors are a pain

-Mark Wahlberg, to the New York Daily News, on making "Ted." He continued: "With a teddy bear, there are no ego problems and you only need one take.
